It is with great pleasure that we announce our return to Inner Mongolia after a period of seven years, this time to the city of Ulanqab, a pivotal location for ferroalloys and ferrochromium production in China.

The event will bring together the industry’s leading figures from around the world and provide an outlook on China’s and international markets.

Ulanqab is a critical area for the Chinese ferrochromium industry. It has seen massive capacity expansion in recent years. Strategically located in the Inner Mongolia autonomous region, 400 km from the Tianjin port and with access to stable energy grids along with potential massive green energy developments,

The event is sponsored by Xin Gang Lian, the world’s largest ferrochromium producer, who will be hosting a technical site visit to their new ferrochromium plant on 13th May 2025.

Event key features:

- Engage with local ferrochrome and stainless steel industry representatives and stakeholders;
- Gain insight into the latest market updates across the industry and the broader economic landscape;
- Learn about China’s approach to green transition in the chrome and stainless steel industry;
- Get the latest update on China’s Belt and Road initiative and what implications it could have for commodities markets,
- In the face of recent market challenges, including oversupply and subdued demand, what is the outlook for recovery?
